

international climate challenge

Sponsored by BARCLAYS

Inspiring Young Change-Makers

- skills to take action on Climate Change

Hamilton House, London

10.30am - 3.30pm Autumn 2010

InterClimate Network invites young people (aimed at ages 14 to 18) and their group leaders and teachers to a workshop-style training day in London.

If you are already carrying out Eco-projects, or if your group is getting going, this is a great opportunity to ...

InterClimate Network is a not-for-profit organisation which aims to inspire action on the key issue of climate change.

Its International Climate Challenge initiative involves young people in India, Kenya and the UK who are actively working on projects to positively influence climate change.

- * develop skills to help bring about change
- * understand more about inspiring others to action
- * connect live to young people in India and Kenya

OUTLINE OF THE DAY

Participants will explore the many elements involved in taking action, and will engage in discussion with current 'change-makers'. Workshops will include:

- planning your own project ideas
- how to motivate other people
- developing networking skills
- using the media and having your voice heard
- connecting between local and global issues

FURTHER INFORMATION

Upload your project summary

See how young people in Kenya and India are affected by climate change and how they are responding

Find resources for thinking critically about Climate Change

Be guided through the mass of science and opinion

www.interclimate.org/challenge

If you would like your students to be considered for the event, please complete the separate Entry Form and send it as soon as possible to:

michila.critchley@interclimate.org

Thank You